

ACCENTURE IS ONE OF THE WORLD'S LEADING organizations providing management consulting, technology and outsourcing services. The company has nearly 281,000 employees with offices and operations in more than 200 cities in 56 countries. Accenture reported fiscal year 2013 net revenue of $28.6 billion.

RECOGNIZING A NEED FOR CHANGE

The company's global real estate costs were on a continued upward spiral that was not in correlation with productivity and performance. Accenture wanted to upgrade its premises while balancing the workspace needs with functional space to accommodate employees. In addition, the company wanted to take advantage of either relocating or repurposing space, to increase and improve collaboration space while also increasing the use of existing workstations. To ensure these goals were achieved, the company needed to make sure it was making business decisions based on facts versus long-term existing perceptions. Accenture chose the AsureSpace SmartView system to gather information and provide instinctive actionable data results.

THE RESULTS

The SmartView data allowed for workspace layouts to be produced that more than achieved the initial goals. The completion of the company workspace reallocation reduced its seat count by approximately half, increased the use of workstations by almost double digits and more than tripled its number of collaborative spaces. Real estate costs became more manageable, while employee performance and productivity increased.

WHY DID ACCENTURE CHOOSE SMARTVIEW?

Asure is an established leader within the corporate space management industry and has helped its customers with innovative technology solutions that target corporate real estate management. Corporate real estate is often the second largest expense at an organization. The push for corporate real estate professionals to cut costs while maintaining individual productivity is a demanding and sometimes complex task. The SmartView solution helps bring costs down while enabling real estate managers to tune in to the needs of employees. Asure's tested and proven solutions are in operation around the globe.
